Nike Hercules Radar" ██████████-9106-68) 25X1A2g

1. Reference B, Paragraph 4, states that ORD had budgeted for spare parts for the Nike Hercules radar. The M & S van, part of the radar system, contained a year's supply of spares for field support costing $53,650.72. The M & S van, including the spares, was assumed to be part and parcel of the radar system transferred at no cost to the Agency.

2. 25X9A5
Upon the movement of the radar system, Fort Bliss (Capt. ██████████) insisted that the spares in the M & S van were to be transferred at cost to the Agency. This was later confirmed by Lt. Col. F. D. Burnett, DSC/LOG, Department of Army.

3. 25X9A5
The spare parts from the M & S van were returned to Capt. ██████████ on 7 August 1968 and an authentic receipt document received and is filed with D/M/OSA.
